Professional Development

Aunty Collective is owned and operated by Indigenous Aunties, Sarah Rhude, Alysha brown and Megan Whonnock, who have combined 55 years of experience working within Indigenous community and Indigenous-focused departments such as Arts and Culture, Education, Social Development, Administration and Advocacy sectors. We share our artistic/professional practices both within community and professionally including painting, drum and rattle making, moccasin and leather work, beading, regalia making, designing, sewing, sculpture, multi-media, singing, dance, performance, drumming, theatre and medicine making. We have curated art exhibitions, exhibited multi-media art, and performed in theatres, festivals, community events, conferences, schools and more, on Vancouver Island and beyond. We are educators, social workers, youth workers, administrators, academics, artists, parents, grandparents, and community members. We consult and provide professional development within the aforementioned sectors. Our experience and skills are a testament to our strength in relationship building and the trust we hold within our various and shared communities. Through our relationships coupled with honed artistic, cultural, and youth programming skills we offer professional development packages that are custom fit to your group's needs. We work with you to create the perfect mix of art, culture and focused skill/knowledge sharing for your particular niche. Choose from any of our workshops and consultants to create a custom, professional, creative, knowledge-sharing/development day.

Here's an example of what we can offer

A Professional Development Day for K-12 Educators

- Welcome to the territory and opening of our circle with song
- 45 min. talk from local community on what it means to live in Lekwungen territories
- Drum making workshop
- Remarks from elders regarding the morning
- Catered lunch from local business
- Circle discussion with Indigenous social worker on duty to report and how to support youth in care
- Closing circle and remarks from AC elder
- Closing song

Contact Aunty Collective and discuss your custom professional development needs.

We look forward to developing relationships and working together!
